

Situation Reaction Test (SRT)

Situation Reaction Test (SRT) is conducted on Day-2, Stage-2 of SSB interviews. It is the third test in the series of 'Psychological tests'. It is important to know the fact that SRT is conducted immediately after the WAT. There is a gap of 10 minutes only between these two tests.

Meaning of SRT

In this test, certain situations are described where the candidate is asked to respond to the situation explained. Situations that are explained or described to the candidates are usually related with day to day real-life situations. The unknown situations are not usually asked to respond.

Example

You are in a hurry to attend an interview while walking to reach the place you see an injured person on the road. You will....

Reaction Take an auto to go to hospital and admit injured person in the hospital, inform his family and will take that auto to reach the interview on time.

Complete Action You admitted the injured person and then attended the interview.

Need of Conducting SRT

The way the response comes from a candidate shows his common sense, time sense, reasoning ability, maturity and empathy. The major quality assessed is the decision-making capability in the given situation; good decision-making is an important trait and attribute to a perfect personality.

Way of Conducting SRT

1. SRT consists of 60 situations total of 30 minutes are allotted to solve the 60 situations, i.e. around 30 seconds are available for every situation.
2. All the 60 day to day situations/activities are printed in a booklet which are distributed to the candidates before the test commences.

3. The candidates are asked to write his reaction by completing the sentences, as how they would feel, think and act in these situations.
4. The responses are supposed to be written in a separate answersheet provided by the SSB for the same purpose.

➡ Do's and Don'ts for SRT

Do's

- ◆ Practising lot and with a focus is the foremost essence of this test.
- ◆ When you see the situation on the paper. Write whatever comes to mind, but which makes sense.
- ◆ Giving a positive and meaningful reaction is very important.
- ◆ Though uncommon situations are presented, try to make a meaningful conclusion/reaction because it reveals you are capable of handling any situation.
- ◆ If you find that a situation is repeated in another form then give the reaction differently but see it is not contradictory to the previous reaction.

Don'ts

- ◆ Do not make irresponsible reaction, in other words do not merely react to the situation. Let your reaction be filled with responsibility.
- ◆ Do not make the sentence incomplete at the same time the sentence preferably should be short to manage time.
- ◆ Do not make a long explanation because it is time consuming, remember you have only 30 seconds per situation.

In the consecutive pages, some of the Situations and their probable Reasons have been given. The students are required to analyse these situations carefully and then go to their reasons; candidate can make their own reasons also as per the situation given.
